HPV tests: the key to universal screening for cervical cancer?

On September 10, 2014, Cervical Cancer Action will be hosting its tenth webinar. Building on news and information about cervical cancer prevention presented in previous webinars, this event focuses on the expanding evidence that human papillomavirus (HPV) testing could become a game-changer in terms of our ability to protect all women with cervical cancer screening and treatment.

A group of leading global experts will discuss the latest scientific findings, modalities of use, uptake in low- and middle-income countries and the evolution of global and national recommendations for HPV testing—changes that could signal a new era in cervical cancer prevention.
